

MANIFESTO OF DISSENT TO OBJECT TO THE PHILIPPINE NATIONAL POLICE (PNP) CALLING & JOINING THE PEACE COVENANT

We, the undersigned officials and candidates in the Province of Cavite, hereby manifest our strong dissent to the proposed Peace Covenant scheduled on March 12, 2010 in the Imus Headquarters of the Philippine National Police (PNP).

While we view with utmost respect the position of the Parish Pastoral Council for Responsible Voting (PPCRV) and the Diocese of Imus on this, we cannot, in our conscience, participate given the initiative of the Cavite PNP in this exercise. The PNP, through its command in Cavite, has totally lost its moral and legal authority to call and join in this covenant. We no longer believe that the PNP can be a guardian of peace.

On January 8, 2010, the Regional Trial Court of Imus, Cavite, Branch 21, under Executive Judge Norberto J. Qusumbing, issued, effective January 9, 2010, a 72-hour Order restraining the replacement of PNP Senior Superintendent Alfredo Soto Corpus by Senior Superintendent Primitivo Tabujara. The PNP hierarchy defied this Order and proceeded with the installation of Senior Superintendent Primitivo Tabujara.

Subsequently, on January 19, 2010, the same Court, this time Branch 50, under Judge Perla Falier issued a Status Quo Ante Order similarly restraining the replacement of Senior Superintendent Alfredo Soto Corpus by Senior Superintendent Primitivo Tabujara and further made it clear in unmistakable terms that Senior Superintendent Corpus should be retained in his post. The PNP again coldly defied this Order. Senior Superintendent Tabujara is now the PNP Provincial Director of Cavite against the Orders of the Court.

For the PNP, from Secretary of Interior and Local Government Ronaldo Punong to Cavite PNP Director Primitivo Tabujara, to openly defy the lawful orders of the court with such ease and convenience is also to transgress our dignity as a nation. The PNP, being the transgressor, cannot demand respect for the law from our people.

The Poll Automation Law will be implemented for the first time in the coming May 2010 election. We now sense a widespread feeling of anxiety that the PNP as an institution may be used by self-serving politicians to alter the outcome of the elections to their ends given the PNP's guts to violate the law. It now becomes the concern of the whole Filipino nation.

Unless the PNP leadership is sincerely revamped, or by the light of Providence there is a change in their hearts, we have no more faith in the PNP. But we continue to have faith in the Filipino: the secular, religious, teachers, workers, farmers, women, youth, professionals, entrepreneurs, businessmen and others. We ask you to share our sentiments and be the vanguards of peace in this coming elections.

The PNP may continue what it is tasked to do. But we shall keep our faith to ourselves, and fight for our God-given right to dignity and honor. We are committed to peace and we will take it upon ourselves to uphold peace now and forever.

Signed this 10th day of March, 2010 in Imus, Cavite.

NO WORLD MATCHES
Pacquiao's opponent Manny Pacquiao is in the corner of the ring while waiting with trainer Freddie Roach during a media workout in Davao, Philippines, on Tuesday. Pacquiao will have a boxing debut in a world welterweight boxing match in Arlington, Texas, on March 12.

Pacman says speed key vs Clottey

"You cannot underestimate Joshua Clottey," he said. "He's a good fighter, but he's bigger than me, and I have to be very focused in the fight."
"Skill over fights"
Pacquiao's trainer Freddie Roach acknowledged that former IBF title holder Clottey, a natural welterweight, had a size advantage over the champion, who began his career as a flyweight.
"But I don't think size wins fights," Roach said. "I think skill does. In any way, in a fight against that Clottey on the inside, he might hit a little harder, but I think our speed will nullify that."

Roach said he had been watching footage of Clottey's fights and had identified a few key habits that he and his fighter intended to exploit.
"He'll wait for you to throw a combination and then, when you stop, he'll throw back. So if you stand in front of him, you're an idiot," he said. "We're not going to let that. He's not going to be able to find us."
"Sometimes, he uses his head," Roach said of Clottey. "So I (Roach) want his head to be in a bad place when he is disqualified for head butts."
"If you fall into the pocket with him, he'll punch it as an opponent and his speed but punch it a hard hit. So we're not going to go in there. We're going to fight him at distance."

Amazing turnout
A crowd of several hundred watched Pacquiao's entrance, a scene that a boxing promoter, 30-3-1 (20-0-0), described as "amazing."
The fight will be the first to be held at Cebu's stadium, with 45,000 spectators expected to attend, and the Filipino said he was looking forward to the opportunity to show his skills in front of such a large audience at a home venue.
"The very excited to fight in Cebu's stadium, especially because this is the first fight here," Roach said. "It's so home to fight in Cebu. I can't wait to see it. This is the first time. This is a big chance to show them what I can do."

The offer was made through a Villar intermediary sometime last year, Medialga said in a TV interview yesterday. He made the same allegation in an interview in January but requested that it be kept off the record.
"It was the latest of many offers from Villar," Medialga, 40, told the Manila Am. Council. "I was offered P1 billion to stop boxing him over the C-1000 project controversy."

In a Jan. 27 interview, Medialga said she asked the boxer not to say anything about the alleged offer for the safety of Villar's enemies.
Roach on the phone yesterday said Medialga said she was "forced" to take the P1 billion bid after the public pressure I can't tell a lie" when the matter was brought up by "Living with the Stars" host Nene Dizon.
She described the encounter as a "childhood friend, an old family friend," but she said she was a "private person." Villar's people have been in touch with her since they up

Leading legacy
Romulo, who served as president of the UN General Assembly from 1959 to 1960, pushed the establishment of the special assembly to monitor progress to fulfill the UN's role in maintaining peace and security, to enhance cooperation among nations and to promote international law.
"The special committee is a lasting legacy that the Philippines and General Romulo have given to the UN. It is a testament that the Philippines with the key UN body is a champion of peace," the UN said, quoted Manila Bulletin.

Plan to declare
When the Philippines led the special committee, the UN General Assembly passed a resolution on Nov. 15, 1962 that adopted the so-called Manila Declaration on the Peaceful Settlement of International Disputes.
The UN said that on his long and historic service in the United Nations, Romulo gave particular emphasis to the role of law and the maintenance of peace and security, which are at the heart of the work of the special committee.
"No great war the organization General Romulo gave to the work of the special committee that he decided to give his last breath to the UN during the 1980 session of the special committee," the UN said.

CA junks 'Morong 43' Loren says Mar asked her to withdraw habeas corpus plea day told the Supreme that they would appeal the ruling.

She was sentenced to the death of the Philippine of habeas corpus. It means one doesn't want to be deprived of personal liberty, meaning that.

But he and his legal colleagues believed that the decision had a "lightning chance" in the Supreme Court.

The military claims that based on the evidence, because and because it was partially confirmed at the hearings, the Morong 43 were engaged in a bomb-making venture, and not in a health-seeking venture.

Decision of duty

Once a person decided to duty assigned to court, he may no longer question his conviction through a petition for issuance of a writ of habeas corpus," the appellate court said in its ruling dated March 9 and written by Justice Antonio Carpio.

The majority opinion also said that whatever violations had been committed—as any of the health workers, Dr. Anita Morales, operated during one of the habeas corpus hearings—were "void" by the filing of criminal charges and the issuance by the hearing Regional Trial Court (RTC) of criminal case orders for the Morong 43 continued detention in Camp Cagayan.

Associate Justice Maglalana and Loren and Josemaria Villan occurred, the two original members of the special division—Associate Justice Benmariano Paez and Francisco Torres—dissented.

Paez and Torres said that in upholding the arrest of the Morong 43, the court in effect "decided to deny its jurisdiction over them."

They asked the court to grant habeas corpus for the Morong 43 and the court in the nation. It is a declaration of one's own status that is the position of civil liberties instead of criminal. It is a hearing, maybe, and proceed, the court of decisions to determine the rights and status of one's own status in society," Torres said in his dissenting opinion.

He said the search warrant used by military and police officers to raid the house of Dr. Morales Villanosa was invalid because it was issued against one Maria Gonzales, who was not among the 43 arrested, and did not specify an exact address.

Constitute information

Torres also said the Supreme proceedings were not valid because the Morong 43 were denied their right to counsel. Thus, he said, the information filed in the Morong RTC was invalid.

"The subsequent filing of the information based on defective proceedings would just put to naught the most cherished right of a citizen: the right to counsel," he said, adding:

"Not only for all, we must free ourselves from the shackles of constitutive information if we are to preserve our constitutional, recognized rights... Access to objective information is justly legal warrants, arrests and detentions would definitely make every habeas corpus proceeding ineffective in fulfilling justice to subject but for its sake."

It has been dissenting opinion, Torres also mentioned that the arrests and subsequent filing of charges should be nullified because the health workers' constitutional rights were violated.

"[T]he use of force cannot strip anyone of his or her rights without a judicial order, as well as any irregular police conduct upon him a valid information, otherwise referred to as 'warranted or tentative' information," Torres said.

He said the Morong 43 were not caught in flagrante delicto or in the act of committing an offense.

who retained had been brought before any court. Otherwise, I want to say each of them, and to the public to obtain more than just an affidavit statement to a medical law case, justice, dignity, dignity, with all due respect that allows trials for these acts to graduate into more valid information," Paez said.

Legal positions

The health workers were charged under the Human Rights Act with illegal promotion of grenades and explosives and in violation of the Commission on Human Rights.

They were subpoenaed to appear by State Prosecutor Francisco Villanosa of the Department of Justice on Feb. 7, a day after their arrest.

On Feb. 12, on a day after lawyers filed the petition for a writ of habeas corpus, the filing of the RTC bench 39 presided over by Judge Josemaria Torres, do-Conte issued a commitment order directing the jail warden of Camp Cagayan to take custody of the health workers.

In their petition for a writ of habeas corpus, the lawyers of the health workers denied that they were communist rebels and asked the court to order their release from military detention.

The lawyers said the Morong 43 were held incommunicado and were not receiving treatment for them, and subjected to prolonged (initial) interrogation and physical and psychological tortures. They said the military denied visits by the health workers' relatives and lawyers.

The lawyers also said the Morong 43 were members of the Community Medicine Development Foundation and Community for Health Development, which they said is a pro-health service to poor communities.

'Outdated' doctrine

But stating what he and his colleagues "maintain that the case is a compelling reason for the court to modify the Alcala doctrine and to make the case an exception."

He said the arrest of the Morong 43 was "illegal, improper and irregular," and that "the filing of charges within the prescribed time period does not cure the illegality of the arrest."

In a statement, the health workers' lead lawyer, Ramon Guebara, and he and members of the Public Interest Law Center and the National Union of People's Lawyers said they had "no recourse but to denote the case to the Supreme court."

"In simply adhering to the outdated Alcala doctrine, a retroactive martial law period (the Court) of Appeals seriously disregarded the liberty of the civil liberties of the constitutional rights of these 43 health workers. From the time they were unlawfully arrested and the continued abuse of their basic human rights in the hands of the military," Guebara said.

He believed that the Morong 43's right to due process had been "grossly violated by the current Alcala ruling."

"It is high time the Supreme Court reconsidered the application of doctrine which has served as a tool of the government, the military and the police to usurp the individual's constitutional and civil liberties of members of progressive organizations," he added.

The lawyers are also preparing for a hearing set by the Commission on Human Rights (CHR) on March 15. The CHR has on December 10, 2009, to be taken to the hearing, and also to meet several military police and justice officials, as well as the judge who issued the search warrant.

Martial law rule

The militant group Amnong Mahabuhay, through its secretary general Ramon Paez, A. announced the military detention and launched the dissenting opinions of Torres and Morales.

"It was a clear decision, and provided basis for issuing a martial law rule that is the Alcala doctrine," Torres said.

SEN. LOREN DEACON DIED YESTERDAY after an event, Sen. Alan Sonza, had tried to arrange a deal with her to withdraw from the vice-presidential race.

"Back when I had yet to find my running mate, Alan tried to make an arrangement with the 'variable of the political process,'" Legarda said in a radio interview.

She said the offer was made before the Senate adjourned last week.

Legarda increased that saying by first asking her to withdraw from the vice-presidential race. She said: "If there's any way that you can support my proposal and me, if there's anything you want, we can make it."

Talking in riddles

"Please don't talk to me in riddles," she said the said Sonza, during one of his meetings with Legarda.

Her political adviser interpreted Sonza's statement as "something like an exchange deal."

Legarda told him that there was "no backing out for me."

"For me, the vice-presidency was just a natural choice because for me, getting to the presidency takes time. She had the vice-presidency to be the natural continuation of my public service and my wish to improve the lives of Filipinos by focusing on food security, jobs, health, peace and ethics, and a broader movement," she said.

In the meantime, the Legarda said that Legarda was getting "desperate" as Sonza continued to pull away in water option paths.

In the latest Social Weather Stations survey in February, Sonza had Legarda by 17 percentage points.

Legarda said she expected that by April 1, she would be ahead of Sonza in the polls, predicting that Sonza had a head start in the campaign and had spent over P1 billion on his political ads.

Marinduque seeks 'pawikan' habitat

By Gerald Gene R. Quinsion

FREQUENT sightings and efforts to rescue sea turtles or "pawikan" in Marinduque have prompted local environmental officials and advocates to work double time to have the island province declared a critical habitat of the marine creatures.

Rene de la Reyes, acting head of the provincial office, wildlife and natural resource management unit of the province, said the declaration would enable those concerned to initiate measures to reduce or eradicate threats in the watershed of the turtles.

In the past few years, six pawikan have been rescued in different coastal villages of Marinduque and eventually released to the sea, according to the Provincial Environment and Natural Resources Office (PENRO). Among those were green sea, olive ridley and the new Hawaiian monk seals, the most threatened species.

Last year alone, 35 were rescued and set free, along with 157 hatchlings.

Rich biodiversity

The presence of the carbonaceous that the province's coastal areas serve as their nesting grounds, including around and past of migration, De la Reyes said.

It also means that these areas are rich in marine marine biodiversity.

MARINDUQUE plans to initiate measures to protect the "pawikan" with the declaration of a critical habitat as its conservation have been serving as nesting grounds for the sea creatures. The photo in Marinduque Bay in Lucena City showing the typical Bay.

University, Davao Oriental, Zamboanga, said. He pointed out that Marinduque is one of the provinces comprising the North Island Province (NIPRO) that marine scientists have described as "the cradle of the spawning of marine biodiversity."

"Everybody must be a stakeholder," De la Reyes said in putting forward the declaration of critical habitat. "The primary beneficiaries of this advocacy will be the communities. Village fish should be in charge of their conservation," he added.

The Department of Environment and Natural Resources (DENR) is a critical habitat of threatened species as they "designated based on scientific data, taking into consideration species vulnerability and extent and the protection of biodiversity and threats to the survival of wildlife."

This is a critical pawikan habitat in Marinduque, according to DENR.

They can also prohibit visitation.

Wigand Maglana, executive director of the Marinduque Coastal Environmental Conservation Office (MCECO), expressed concern that climate change was now taking its toll on the turtles.

Their "original habitat is getting warmer now, driving them to seek sanctuary in the coastal waters of the province," he said.

Maglana and MCECO had already launched its pawikan protection and conservation program among the villages. It has come up with an incentive program for fishfolk who capture the turtles and report their catch to authorities.

"We give livelihood assistance to fishfolk, P10,000 for the smaller ones," he said.

The PENRO and the MCECO are looking for action plans of the surrounding communities to stop any trapping, harassment, forest group harassment and resource exploitation.

"The plans and recommendations that will be formulated will be the basis of the DENR. Although an executive order by the secretary or the local government units through resolutions or resolutions," he said.

The need to call a conference on climate change adaptation, specifically disaster risk reduction and management, came to the fore when typhoon Ondoy hit Metro Manila on September 26, 2009. The extent of the disaster, and the realization that this capital, much less the entire country, was unprepared for such an event, and the subsequent finger-pointing that happened months after the disaster struck, became the impetus to assess the current capabilities of government and private institutions to forecast weather, avoid and reduce damage, and to identify preparedness and vulnerability gaps in the areas of such events.

Actual disasters of such a scale as Ondoy or Panging are more frequent; their ability to generate an unpreparedness crisis will no longer be questioned. As such, COMSTE is initiating a project to bring wide-spread information and communication technology (ICT) infrastructure that can improve information across the country in real time, personnel with collaborations with other agencies for scientific data, and our own long experience in analysis and modeling for disaster preparedness.

All these have motivated us the need for our government to have science-driven and state-of-the-art disaster risk reduction and management. This five-day conference titled "Engineering Resilience: Confronting Risk Beyond Adaptation" slated for March 15-16, 2010 at the Sofitel Philippine Plaza in Manila, aims to discuss climate change adaptation, and disaster risk and resilience in the Philippine setting, in the context of food and agriculture, public health, energy, infrastructure, and coastal and marine resource management. It intends to bring together national leaders, local governments, financial institutions, international experts, and non-governmental organizations in the hope of building a coherent and integrated S&T strategy for resilience.

By Jerry E. Espinosa

THREE OF THE SIX PHILIPPINE COAST Guard (PCG) personnel who reportedly raped a woman following a drinking spree at the agency's office in Paoay City have been discharged from the service.

Adm. Wilfredo Tanaya, PCG commander, said in a statement yesterday that the three enlisted men were found to have violated a rule which prohibits the drinking of liquor inside the agency's facilities.

The three also violated another rule which forbids its personnel from bringing civilians inside any Coast Guard station for good 10 p.m.

The Coast Guard, Tanaya, did not identify the three discharged personnel.

Meanwhile, Lt. Cmdr. Benjamin Baldo, head of the PCG public information office, said he is because that the other Coast Guard personnel, whom he also did not identify, were still being investigated.

Two of them are charged for raping the child sex trade is rising, others who the alleged rape took place. Our investigations have yet to establish their involvement in the case, he said.

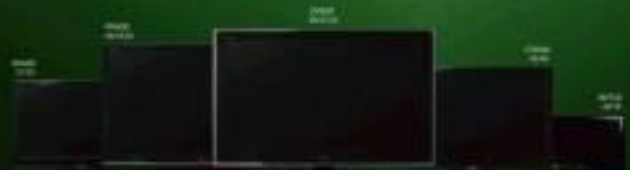

He added that the agency was "willing to look the personnel over to the police should their responsibility be established."

The victim, a resident of Tuguegarao City, filed charges against the six Coast Guard personnel after they reportedly raped her following a drinking spree on March 2 inside the Negros, Comisariato, Bacolod and Information Systems Services office in Zamboanga.

January exports surge 42.5% to $3.58B

Growth rate highest since April 1995

By Raul G. Marcelo and Rigel C. Llo

EXPORT EARNINGS SURGED 42.5 PERCENT TO $3.58 billion in January as electronics shipments increased by more than half, the National Statistics Office reported yesterday. Electronic Planning Secretary Augusto B. Santos said the growth was the highest since April 1995. The January performance was a reversal from the 40.5-percent decline to $1.71 billion in the same month of 2009, which was the biggest setback during a 13-month slump due to the global economic crisis.

Stocks sustain rally
 LOCAL STOCKS SUSTAINED a rally last week, driven by a rise in utility stocks which climbed on the back of a power play and a looming power crisis in the country.

The main index Philippine Stock Exchange Index gained another 13.28 points to 5,044.91 to close at 5,044.91.

The rally was led by telecommunications giant Philippine Long Distance Telephone Co., Abbot Power Corp., as well as Lapar-based First Gen Corp. and Energy Development Corp., which have become more attractive given an anticipated shortage of power-generating capacity in the country.

Total trades amounted to P23.4 billion, with 158 ordinary shares of 100 shares and 10 exchange-traded funds posted by the industry, including and national sectors offset the weakness in individual, property and services sub-sectors.

How fast the rally is resulting the year's highest of 3,135 at a very steep pace. It was not enough, however, after falling a double digit, 149 points, in the week ended Jan 5.

PSE's share price rose 0.2 percent to P25.80 and advanced for 16 percent of the year, ahead of PSE's 10 percent rise in 2009. The record date when investor must be on the company's books as a shareholder to receive the dividend.

Other gains came from National Televison Corp., Metropolitan Bank and Trust Co., Vito and First American Inc. and Abbot Global Group Inc. The local market was also supported by some foreign buying, which was reflected by the recent share appreciation of the peso. Investors also have been in a relatively upbeat trading in the market.

Overnight, 30 stocks rose and the benchmark PSE 2000 index rose for the Standard & Poor's 500 index on expectations that the economy will continue to recover from the recent contraction since the last expansion of the 1990s.

El Niño damage to farm sector at P8B

ESTIMATED DAMAGE TO CROPS and livestock due to the El Niño dry spell has so far reached 20 billion, according to officials of the Department of Agriculture.

"The El Niño is becoming more and more severe," Agriculture Secretary Prospero Sanon said yesterday. He said the total damage as of March 2, 2010, reached P8 billion, but that the damage to rice and other crops, trees and other damage, up to high-value crops such as fruits and vegetables while there was estimated damage to livestock.

The rice crops alone, about 200,000 tons, were damaged, he said.

And whether the National Food Authority would require more rice to cover the production loss to the El Niño, Sanon said, and the government has not decided whether it would go back to the market.

Sanon said the grain agency is now always ready to act but was waiting for advice from the government's emergency committee on rice and corn.

Agriculture Undersecretary Joel Sanon said in an interview that the P8 billion was the verified crop damage to date. He said that the government was working all reports from regional field units and some have been placed as to be "non-veridical."

"There are some cases claiming damage but they were apparently referring to a third crop which should not have been placed as all in their area. We are working out these claims to find out what is the real damage," Sanon said.

The Philippines is now at the tail end of the El Niño weather phenomenon, although its effects will be felt until June, according to National Data, Philippine Atmospheric, Geophysical and Astronomical Services Administration

Delicious meatless 'pakbet'

Use
vegetarian
'chikaron'
for Lene

By Norma G. Chibanas
Contributor

HERE IS A DELICIOUS VEGETARIAN meatless recipe that includes lots of pork in chikaron to make it more familiar. That makes perfect a combo on the Friday or Lent, when many Catholics abstain from eating meat.

Here's a recipe for pakbet that uses, instead of meat, a blend of vegetables (chikaron, if it's not too late to the porking, I would have believed that it's really vegetarian chikaron—there is such like this and doing).

Although it's called a meatless recipe, it's not a recipe, but one is appropriate for the dish, due to its unique origin. By using it to test your substitute, you can have a delicious meal and any day of the year.

Lenen Pakbet

- 1 medium onion, sliced diagonally
- 1 small onion, peeled and cut into 1/2-inch cubes
- 1 eggplant, sliced diagonally
- 1 small bunch kale, cut into 2-inch pieces
- 8-10 per slice, minced, head made in sections, sliced into halves diagonally
- 2 medium tomatoes, sliced lengthwise
- 1 medium carrot, sliced
- 4-5 slices garlic, crushed
- 1/2 cup bay leaves
- 2 L of water
- 1 cup 60% Mar's Grated Vegetarian Chikaron (one 50-gram pack), cut into 1/2-inch pieces

Drizzle vegetable oil into these meats in meat, using water to moisten some of the fatless. In a medium pot, sauté the onion, eggplant, carrot, and garlic, stir in the oil, stirring with the vegetable, the water, and pour over the vegetables.

Cover the tomatoes and sauté the vegetables. However, you must first sauté the chikaron, and the chikaron on top and continue stirring for another 1-2 minutes or until vegetables are crisp-tender. Serve immediately with rice.

Pakbet with vegetable chikaron

Tip

- If you're not sure what to do, immediately after the chikaron, sauté your cooking time so that the pakbet is cooked just before you start lunch or dinner.
- The chikaron is the vegetable in the recipe is a guide. You can use as much as 100% of each vegetable in your dish.
- Include some bay leaves in the pakbet with the other pieces of vegetable chikaron, you can use vegetable chikaron (chikaron) or use the vegetable just before cooking.

VICTORIO EDADES

Once again, Rockwell breaks away from local design conventions with Eddies Tower and Garden Villas. Eddies creates the co-existence of a tower containing Garden 2 Lulls jutting out of the Marina landscape, and also garden villas in a playful cluster of forested units. There's a piazza to house several retail establishments, apart from the exclusive retail stores where you can enjoy your dining and shopping experience at the Power Plant Mall.

There are just some of Eddies' life-changing features, reflective of National Artist Eddades' revolutionary aesthetic. It's the latest piece in the Rockwell masterpiece where art inspires and steers the creation of form that is always delightful and never ordinary.

ROCKWELL AND LOPEZ MASTERPIECES: WEAVING PHILIPPINE ARTISTRY TOGETHER

2010 marks Rockwell Land's big push for its latest residential project, Eddades Tower and Garden Villas, inspired by the father of Philippine modern art, Victorio Eddades. Eddades promises to be a structural masterpiece: defying real estate conventions with hi-level loft units transforming into garden villas, and 2 Lulls jutting out into garden decks.

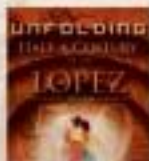

It was just fitting then for Rockwell to host the 100th Anniversary celebration of the Lopez Museum, home to Hologos, Lunas, and Anipolos, which are Rockwell namesakes for its iconic residential towers.

The museum's irreplaceable examples of Philippine heritage and document materials that deeply and critically reflect the country's collective past. In the end, a nation's inability to appreciate its past will hinder all efforts to reach its destination.¹

This year, the Lopez Museum is committed to move the institution forward by pursuing an interdisciplinary approach, starting with the launching of the coffee table book, Unfolding This Century: The Lopez Memorial Museum, last February 18th at the Rockwell Tent. Complementing the bridge character usually associated with museum events, the Lopez Museum capped the celebration with a multi-sensory exhibition: Thread at Rockwell.

The Lopez Museum's current issue of artwork started as the late Lopez Group founder Eugenio M. Lopez Sr.'s personal collection. It has since grown to be one of Asia's finest, with its mix of valuable 19th century Lunas and Hologos, and modern masterpieces. The library also currently boasts over 18,000 Filipino titles by 12,000 authors, rare books, maps, manuscripts and literary works.

Lopez Group chairman Oscar M. Lopez puts it, "By launching the museum and opening it to the public, my father intended to in perpetuity larger than the display of an outstanding collection. We continue efforts to safeguard
